The Africa Energy Indaba is the World Energy Council (WEC) African regional event and as such the event receives global recognition as the foremost event for energy professionals operating in Africa, wanting access to the growing African energy sector. Other strategic partners include the NEPAD Planning & Coordinating Agency and the South African National Energy Association.

The African energy sector requires USD 40 billion worth of investment annually with a production capacity requirement of 7,000 megawatts per year to meet the demand required to ensure energy access to all Africans.

This presents a major opportunity for companies to explore business opportunities in the African energy sector.
